"Greetings, Doc!" Bugs Bunny called to Elmer Fudd one cold wintry day. "Today's the day we race against each other in the ice carnival at the lake."

"Be wight with you, Bugs," Elmer replied, hastily wrapping two big scarves around his neck. He gathered up his skates, and, a moment later, they were on their way to the lake.

"Brrr!" Bugs shivered. "Old Man Winter's breathing right down my neck and leaving a trail of goosebumps all the way!"

He glanced at Elmer enviously. "I sure wish I had a big scarf like yours to keep my neck warm," he said through chattering teeth. "You don't look a bit cold, Fuddsy."

"Cowwect," Elmer said smugly. "That's because I'm wearing two scarves instead of one."

"Well, say, Doc," Bugs squawked. "How's about taking one off and lending it to me? Then we'll both be warm."

"Nothing doing!" Elmer snapped. "If I lend you one, I might get colder myself."

Bugs argued and pleaded but to no avail, and, some time later, they arrived at the lake where they struggled into their skates.

Bugs tittered to himself as he watched Elmer grunting and straining over his skates. "The old grouch has got so many clothes on, he can hardly even bend over," he giggled. "Hmm," he mumbled with a crafty smile, "that gives me an idea of how I can teach him a good lesson!"

He turned to Elmer. "Tell you what I'm gonna do, Fuddsy, old pal," he said aloud. "I've warmed up pretty well from hiking over here, so I'll lend you this jacket of mine to wear over everything else you have on."

"Golly, Bugs," Elmer said hesitantly. "It wouldn't be wight to take . . ."

"Tut-tut-tut!" Bugs clucked airily, handing the jacket to Elmer. "I still have this heavy sweater underneath to keep me warm."

"Well, if you insist," Elmer said eagerly, struggling into the jacket.

"Come on, let's get out on the starting line. The race is about to roll," Bugs called, already skating off.

Elmer skated after him, and, a moment later, the race was on.

Bugs, feeling light and speedy without his heavy jacket, spurted away like a flash and soon left Elmer far behind.

"Hey!" Elmer yelped. "All these clothes are slowing me down! I can't swing my arms to help me get up speed!"

Puffing and panting, Elmer floundered after Bugs. He plucked at his scarf to loosen it up so he could breathe more easily, and soon one end of it was flying in the wind like a flag.

And that's when he got the surprise of his life! Tripping over the end of the scarf with one skate, he went flopping through the air and crashed — KERPLOP — right on the ice.

"Who turned out the lights?" he mumbled in a daze, as Bugs helped him to his feet a few minutes later.

"You did, Doc," Bugs snickered slyly. "While I went on to win the race, you took a nose dive, and it's a good thing, too."

"What do you mean?" Elmer gasped, surprised.

"I mean, I hope it taught you a lesson," Bugs giggled. "You goofed when you got all wrapped up in yourself. And you should have known you'd just end up in a bind."

"Hmm," Elmer sighed with resignation. "Somehow I get the feeling that that wascally wabbit has twicked me again!"

"RIGHT NOW, you're probably asking yourself—

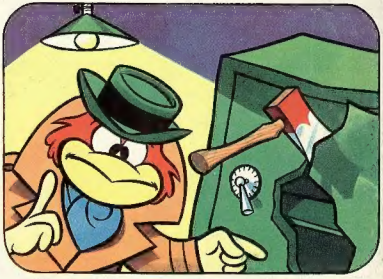
"Fresh up" Freddie says:

How does a private eye get a quick, refreshing lift?"



"I'm a private eye. I solve mysteries—like Who Cracked Open the Safe in the Walnut Nut Co. and Stole the Company Assets—$1.37!"

"Somebody tell these crazy, mixed-up crooks I'm supposed to capture them! I must be tired. What I need is my secret weapon—7-Up—out of my refrigerated holster!"

"It always works! Seven-Up gives me new energy quick. No private eye should be without it. Nothing does it like Seven-Up!"

Copyright 1959 by The Seven-Up Company

Here's a clue for when you need energy. One bottle of 7-Up gives you honest-to-goodness new energy in just two to six minutes! As "Fresh up" Freddie always says: " 'Fresh up' with Seven-Up!"
